CORRESPONDENT.

Our Correspondent "Hibernicus" does not appear to have observed that the article in the Calcutta Journal to which he alludes, is an extract from an English periodical work; his animadversions on the political principles of the Bengal Editor, do not therefore exactly apply in this instance, and we withhold his letter until a further communication is made.

THE COURIER.

BOMBAY,

SATURDAY, AUGUST 9TH, 1823.

Since the publication of our last number, official intelligence of War having actually commenced between France and Spain on the 7th April has been received through Mr. Salt the British Consul at Cairo, from the Spanish Consulate at that place. This information, has been confirmed by notices from Malta, Leghorn and Trieste, so as to leave no doubt of the fact.

No additional information is contained in the official dispatch, and the statements which are found in the newspapers, brought by the same conveyance, of the Spanish ports being shut against the Ships & effects of Austria, Russia and Prussia are so little likely to prove true, that we cannot for a moment give credit to them.—The Spanish Constitutional Government has always, hitherto, exhibited proofs of the greatest forbearance and moderation, and it would certainly be an act little short of madness in their circumstances to adopt so violent a measure.

The William Miles, arrived at Madras, which left England on the 10th April, has brought English papers of two days later date than the Charles Forbes, and extracts from them, relating to the hostile movements on the Continent, will be found in another page.

The following information respecting the movements of the new Governor General, collected from the Madras papers will be interesting to all our readers.

"With reference to our Supplement of Wednesday last, we have to add to the entertainments consequent on the arrival of our new Governor General the Right Honorable Lord AMHERST and Family.—They were entertained by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and Lady CAMPBELL on Tuesday—on Wednesday a Nautch was given in honor of their arrival by His Highness the NUWAUB of the Carnatic—on Thursday morning the Review already alluded to took place at the Mount and in the Evening the Honorable the Governor gave a grand Dinner at the Banqueting Room; after which the Drawing Room was held by Lady AMHERST, as announced on a former occasion—and yesterday evening the Honorable C. Stratton and Lady entertained the Governor General .....Duty imperiously demands our particularising these festivities—but our ability falling very far short of our inclination, we are compelled to content ourselves with cursorily noticing them—As far as ... Review, it must be a source ... reflect that the Right H... General expressed ... the appear...

...22d Re... under the ... distinguishe... veton, K. C. ... and his excellen... ed the spectacle ... ll the personal and ... Lord AMHERST reache... after day-break and was ... of 19 guns.—The number of ... ceeded 4,000. The whole presented a spe... magnificently grand—equally conspicuous for mi... litary science, perfection of discipline, and steadiness of conduct—and where merit is so generally pre-eminent, it would be invidious to particularise. We heard the Artillery Horse Brigade spoken of in terms of the highest admiration, as also the other corps forming this imposing spectacle—and where praise has been bestowed by the Illustrious Personage in whose honor the exhibition took place, it would be a matter of more than presumption in us to dilate on the subject.

What can be said of the Nautch that took place on Wednesday evening? seldom has the Eastern World witnessed a spectacle so superb. We felt a charm in the scene, which, for a time made us indifferent to every other amusement. On our arrival at this place of enchantment we were surprised & delighted to find all around most magnificently and brilliantly illuminated—and the very tinkling of the golden anklets of the Dancing Girls breathed an air of music around, which we little expected. In short, the whole scene seemed to strew flowers along our path, whose sweetness of the moment we ought gratefully to inhale, without calling upon them for a brightness and durability beyond their nature—There seemed to be every precious flower that poetry, or religion has ever consecrated—the "Rose" was given in "blushing beauty" to every visitor, in short such a brilliant display of light and life and beauty made us fancy ourselves in a place of enchantment.—At 10 o'clock supper was announced—of this part of the subject we can only say that every thing bore indication of the most profuse & princely liberality.—At supper, his Highness the Nabob, through the interpretation of Captain MacLean, proposed the health of Lord & Lady AMHERST, & a safe arrival at Bengal—this toast was received with every demostration of feeling of the most cordial and respectful nature—and the compliment was returned by the Governor General by proposing the health of his Highness and Family.—After which the Company retired to witness the Fireworks.—The passage to this exhibition seemed a kind of "Court Yard" from whose centre rose jets of water, "smooth and unbroken to such a dazzling height, that they seemed like pillars of diamond in the sunshine—contrasted with the watery element, was a display of fireworks which broke out so sudden and so brilliant, that they seemed to form a line of dancing lights along the horizon"

It now only remains for us to express a double regret—the one source arises from the intended departure of the Right Honorable the Governor General for Bengal this day—we can therefore only add our written echo to the toast already proposed on Wednesday—"a safe and speedy arrival at the seat of his Lordship's Government"—the other cause of our sorrow is the report that we have to make of the sudden and severe indisposition of our highly respected Commander-in-Chief Sir Alexander Campbell—this circumstance prevented his Excellency's attendance at Lady AMHERST'S Drawing Room on Thursday evening.—It is however with sincere satisfaction that we announce the convalescence of his Excellency.—The Drawing Room was held at the Ameer Baugh and was numerously and brilliantly attended.

The Right Honorable LORD AMHERST having intimated his intention of re-embarking this morning, the Troops in Garrison were paraded at an early hour, and with the Body Guard of The Honorable THE GOVERNOR, formed a street from the Walajah Gate to the Sea Gate of Fort St. George—The Gentlemen of His Majesty's and the Honorable Company's Services had been invited to attend His Lordship on this occasion.

Soon after 5 o'clock, The Honorable The GOVERNOR repaired, with his Staff, to the Ameer Baugh; and LORD AMHERST proceeded with Sir THOMAS MUNRO in his Carriage to the Walajah Bridge. His Lordship was here met by His Highness THE NUWAB, who had resolved to take leave of His Lordship at the foot of the Glacis, and had taken his station on the Bridge for that purpose. His Highness, however, afterwards preferred to accompany His Lordship in his progress through the Fort.

His Lordship embarked under appropriate salutes from the ramparts and from the Battery at Chepauk, and as the Government Accommodation Boat passed out, His Majesty's Ship Liffey and Sophie had their yards manned; and salutes were fired from those Ships, and from the Honorable Company's Ship Atlas and the other Vessels in the Roads.

LORD AMHERST was accompanied by COMMODORE GRANT, C. B, the Chief Secretary, the Town Major, the Master Attendant and other Officers.—His Lordship was saluted on boarding, and the yards of H. M. Ship Jupiter were manned for the occasion.

LADY AMHERST and Family embarked at ... same time with ... got under ... with a ...

The H. C. C. Ternate, Captain Goodridge, arrived from the Persian Gulph on Wednesday night; she left Muscat on the 29th July but brings no public news. We are sorry to hear that Lieutenant Watson, commander of the H. C. Nautilus, died at Bassadore on the 10th July.

The first Ship for England will be the Royal George, Captain Ellerby, to sail, we understand, about the 18th or 20th instant. The Euphrates, Captain Meade, will follow about the end of the month.

CEYLON INTELLIGENCE.

JULY 5, 1823.—The Gazette of this day contains an order of His Majesty in Council, regulating the trade of this Island with foreign States, under which, Ships belonging to the United States of America, which were excluded by the wording of the Treaty of Ghent from trading with the ports of Ceylon, are now admitted, on the same terms as Vessels of other Nations at amity with Great Britain.

We learn from Batticaloa that the Boat Mohamadoe Meera Madeth, No. 68. of that Port and which had sailed from thence to Trincomale on the morning of the 23d ultimo, with a Cargo of Paddy, foundered at Sea a few hours after leaving the River. This unfortunate event is said to have been occasioned by the starting of a Plank in the Boat's bottom; she filled and sunk so rapidly that the Crew were unable to launch the small Canoe that was on board, fortunately however she floated, and was the means of saving all the lives that were on board, with the exception of two women and one man, who we regret to say perished; those who clung to the Canoe were picked up by a Cutter that was at anchor near the spot where the Dhoney foundered.

THE FOLLOWING ARE GENERAL ORDERS ISSUED TO HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES IN INDIA.

Head Quarters, Calcutta; 25th June, 1823.

GENERAL ORDERS.

His Excellency the Commander in Chief in India having been pleased to accept of the resignation of Cornet Partridge of the 11th Light Dragoons, he is to be struck off the strength of that Regiment from this date.
His Excellency the Commander in Chief has been pleased to make the following Appointment until His Majesty's pleasure shall be known.

13th Regiment Light Infantry

Captain J. Debnam from the 65th Regiment to be Captain, vice Brevet Major Fllard, who exchanges.
With reference to General Order, No. 2945 of the 3d Instant, all Letters and Returns relating to His Majesty's Troops under the Supreme Presidency are after the 30th Instant, to be addressed as therein directed, until further Orders, viz. "Head-Quarters" without affixing any particular place.

Head-Quarters, Calcutta; 28th July, 1823.

The undermentioned Officers have received His Excellency the Commander in Chief's leave of Absence for the reasons assigned.
13th Dragoons—Major Paterson, from date of Embarkation for 2 Years, on his Private Affairs.
16th Lancers.—Captain Luard, from 15th June to 24th September, on Medical Certificate, with permission to visit Meerut.

Head-Quarters, on the River, 7th July, 1823.

At a General Court Martial assembled at Fort William on the 17th June 1823. Lieut John Maclean Wood of His Majesty's 44th Regiment of Foot was arraigned upon the undermentioned Charge viz.
For having in a scandalous infamous manner, such as is unbecoming the Character of an Officer and a Gentleman, in having on the evening of the 16th or morning of the 17th Instant, when at the officers. Mess Table of the 44th Regiment in the Garrison of Fort William, said to Lieut. Scott of the same Corps, "you lie or you are a liar," and immediately after repeating the same offensive expressions, his former conduct as established before a general Court Martial, held at Fort William on the 2d January of this year, justifying the conviction that he is habituated to such a departure from the rules of good manners.

(Signed) J. W. MORRISON,
Col. & Lieut. Col. 44th Regt.

FORT WILLIAM, 23d June, 1823

Upon which Charge the Court came to the following decision.
Finding. The Court find the Prisoner Lieut. John Maclean Wood o His Majesty's 44th Regiment Guilty of the Charge preferred against him, with exception to the Words "Scandalous and Infamous" of which they consequently acquit him, and do therefore Sentence him to be severely reprimanded at such time and place as His Excellency the Commander in Chief shall direct.
The Court having passed this lenient Sentence, owe it to themselves to state, that they have been influenced by a consideration of the great provocation which the Prisoner received under peculiar Circumstances and by the very early contrition accompained with earnest offer of atonement which he evinced in his letter to the Commanding Officer of his Regiment on the following Morning, which motives they hope will meet with the approbation and concurrence of His Excellency.

Confirmed,
(Signed) EDWARD PAGET.
General, Commander in Chief.

Remarks by the Commander in Chief.

The Commander in Chief confirms the Sentence of the General Court Martial upon Lieut. Wood, although he can by no means make up his mind to approve it.
It appears to him that no provocation, no loss of reason resulting from Excess, no subsequent apology, can sufficiently excuse or atone for the utterance of words, such as those which issued from the mouth of Lieut. Wood.
It is therefore with Sentiments of the deepest regret, and of uneasiness for the well being of Society, that he finds so grave an offence against good manners so leniently and indulgently visited by the sentence of a General Court Martial.
The Commander in Chief has done his best to vindicate the Honor of the Army from a foul stain. It must rest with higher authority to determine whether Lieut. Wood is still to continue in the Service, and to set at defiance the established rules of decency and decorum.
Lieut. Wood is released from arrest, and will proceed to Europe in virtue of the Leave of Absence already granted to him for the purpose.
The foregoing Orders to be entered in the General Order Book, and read at the head of every Regiment in His Majesty's Services in India.
By Order of His Excellency the Commander in Chief.

PILGRIMS RETURNING FROM GUYA

To the Editor of the Sumachar Chundrica.

Sir

I have heard that some Baboos having gone on a pilgrimage to Guya, performed according to the tenets of religion the funeral rites of their deceased ancestors, and at the time of their return they heard there that two Sepoys had two birds, and as they journeyed with the birds in their hands, they stopped one nigh[t] place, where they were attacked by ro[bbers] killed them and robbed them of all t[heir] At that juncture, one of the birds said robbers, "Why do you kill these men?" on ing these words, they killed one of the birds Afterwards the other Moyna bird flew to Judge (of the place) and informed him of circumstances, who has thereupon imp[risoned] the robbers. The Baboos assert that the eyewitnesses of this occurrence; they are r[eady] the matter to their friends and relation[s] if any person does not believe it they a[re] their fathers and mothers. On this, wha[t] you think of them? in what words abou[t] raise them.

SUPREME COURT.

CALCUTTA, THURSDAY, JULY 17, 182[3]

L. Clarke, Esq. Barrister, v. L. Worral, Adjutant of the Governor General's Body-G[uard]

WARRANTY OF A HORSE.

As this case has excited a good deal of [in]terest, we shall now give a short sketch of [the] chief circumstances attending it; postponing fuller report till our pages are more at lei[sure]
The Horse in question denominated CE[N]TIPEDE (a name, as observed by the Counsel the Plaintiff, apparently like lucus a non lucendo given him because he had bad forefeet, or ha[d] any feet at all) was an Arab, and had arri[ved] in this country from the land of his nati[vity] about three years ago, when he became the p[ro]perty of Mr. C. K. Robinson, who purcha[sed] him from D. Clarke, Esq. for the sum of [Sa.] rupees. He had, it appears, a peculiarity [in] his gait, by his friends called "ambling"—[by] his adversaries "crampness," or "groggine[ss]" or at the worst, "unsoundness"; the for[mer] ascribing this peculiarity to an error in his e[du]cation; the latter to an organic defect, appare[ntly] caused by an injury received when the p[ro]perty of Mr. Robinson. This Gentleman, [in] order to correct the error in his education, a[nd] improve his paces, lent him to his Friend M[r.] Hodgson, Veterinary Surgeon to the Bo[dy] Guard, on a coursing expedition; where instead of being improved, CENTIPEDE unfortunately go[t] one of his forefeet (or its hoof) broken. Afte[r a] considerable time he was cured, it would ap[-] pear of this injury; and CENTIPEDE was ridde[n] for many months by Mr. Robinson's brother, [a] gentleman of fifteen stone, without the lea[st] symptoms of lameness, as far as was ascertained The owner however not being in perfect health and his complaint forbidding him to ride, ha[d] no occasion for him, and the horse was sent t[o] Messrs. Taylor and Co.'s auction along with other 4 horses of Mr. Rutherford; this ho[rse] being ranked on the same list with them in Catalogue, and marked No. 5. He was [not] sold for 640 rupees, a considerable reduction price—arising either from the anxiety of owner to part with an animal he had no imme[di]ate use for, or a lower opinion being now ent[er]tained of his value. Passing through the ha[nds] of several persons, most of whom seemed to [en]tertain a prejudice against him, he became [the] joint property of Mr. Worral, the Defendant and Mr. Hodgson; and was in the name of [the] former again exposed to sale at Mr. Lam[b]'s Auction Room, when Mr. Clarke became [the] purchaser at the price of Sicca Rupees 750. THE COURIER,—APRIL 7.

NIGHT, TWELVE O'CLOCK, APRIL 7.—"We have been favored with the perusal of letters dated Paris, Saturday night, eight, o'clock. Lord Somerset had arrived in the morning from Madrid, and was to set off in a few hours for England. He is stated to have announced, that all negociations with the Spanish Government were entirely at an end.
Paris was inundated with reports. A Russian army was concentrating in Poland, to the number of 150,000 men. Commissioners from the three great Northern Powers, were expected at the headquarters of the French army."

We have received since our last the Paris Papers of Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

The Duchess d'Angouleme left the French capital on Wednesday for Bordeaux. It is almost certain that before she reaches her destination, her Royal Consort will have led the army he commands, into Spain. It was confidently expected at Paris that this event would take place about the 6th or 7th, (yesterday or to-day,) and as lines of telegraphs have been established from Bayonne to Paris, the news of the breaking up of the army will soon be known.

The intelligence from Madrid is not of much importance. It is down to the 20th ultimo. Ferdinand was proceeding slowly on his journey, and was, every where, received with acclamations and marks of popular enthusiasm. The latest accounts left him, on the 26th, at Manzanares. On the 22d the Cortes adjourned its sittings, and the President announced that they would not be resumed till the 23d of April, when its deliberations would be commenced at Seville. The Cortes set out from Madrid on the 23d ultimo, accompanied by the Ministers Egea and San Miguel.

Reports were still prevalent at Paris, of great movements in the Russian army, which were advancing, it is said, by forced marches, to the banks of the Oder. The Journal of St. Petersburgh is warlike, and announces that roubles have fallen because it is certain that the Emperror will engage in a Continental war.

M. de Lostande, the Aid-de-Camp of General Guilleminot, who had been arrested at Bayonne, upon a charge of irregular conduct, arrived at Paris on Wednesday, and was conducted to the Abbaye. The ground of his arrest is stated to be the seizure of a parcel which was directed to him from Paris, containing tri-coloured cockades, and other revolutionary emblems.

EXPRESS FROM PARIS.

COURIER OFFICE, THREE O CLOCK.—We have just received an Express from Paris, bringing the Papers of Saturday morning and one of Saturday evening, as well as private letters of that date.

Our private letters inform us, that the passage of the Bidassoa was to be effected on the 7th; and, that Lord Fitzroy Somerset had arrived at Paris from Madrid, on his way to this country. All negotiation, or idea of preventing war is, as we have all along stated, utterly hopeless. The duke d' Angouleme is expected to publish a Manifesto immediately upon entering Spain.

ASIATIC SOCIETY OF LONDON.

Prospectus.—It has often been a subject of surprise, that a Society for the advancement of Oriental Literary Knowledge, upon the principle of that which has existed so long, and with such distinguished success in Bengal, should not have been established in London by the numerous and respectable persons who have returned from India. It were impossible to conceive a more congenial and satisfactory employment of their leisure, than in fostering and promoting those interests, to the support of which the early part of their lives had been dedicated.

Oriental literature constituted at one time a research of peculiar attraction, and was engaged in with an ardour, correspondent to the interest felt in investigating the attainments of an ancient and civilized people, newly connected with Great Britain. The result may not fully have answered the expectations entertained, but the field still presents some important and interesting objects of inquiry, deserving the attention of the philosopher and the antiquary. There is much reason to hope, that at no distant period, this labour may be shared by intelligent natives of the East, incited to follow up researches into their own history, literature, and antiquities.

The literature of the Chinese, in particular, is yet, with few exceptions, untrodden ground in Great Britain. A very small portion has been brought in any shape before the public. Detailed translations of works of local interest may not be desirable: but a Society established for the promotion of Oriental knowledge, may afford encouragement to the researches of those, who are now pursuing this difficult study, by aid of the valuable dictionaries published under the munificent patronage of the East-India Company; and its transactions may become the receptacle for communications of great interest, respecting the existing state of arts and literature in China, and the countries connected with, and adopting the language of that extensive and least known part of Asia.

The extended intercourse and connexion, which of late years, have taken place generally between the natives of Europe and Asia, & the growing intimacy between that country and England, have occasioned the developement of new subjects of interest, which possess a strong claim to the consideration, not only of the British community, but of all the nations of the western hemi-sphere, and may be expected to lead to results reciprocally beneficial.

It is obvious, that the advantage of this intercourse may be rendered essentially conducive to the interests of science and literature by an association of intelligent persons; who combining local experience with comprehensive knowledge, may lead the public mind to a just appreciation of the solid advantage to be derived from the connexion, and facilitate the advancement of Oriental literature; the diffusion of general knowledge, and the interchange of every thing that may contribute to the welfare and happiness of mankind.

It were superfluous to speak of the improved arts which Asia may derive from her intercourse with Europe; but, as an example of the benefits that may be expected from a more extensive acquaintance with the practical arts of Asia, it may be instanced, that an agricultural drilling machine has been in immemorial use in many provinces of India, although an instrument of the same name is of modern invention in Europe.

Many eminent establishments already exist; associations of scientific persons for the promotion of natural knowledge, & a distinguished Society for the encouragement of arts, manufactures, and commerce, at home and abroad. It is not intended to interfere with the views and proceedings of these or of associations for promoting Education in the East. The purpose is, to found a Society upon an enlarged basis, that may embrace the views, and be adapted to the pursuits of all persons whom it may be desirable to associate, whether their tastes should lead them into historical and antiquarian research—to a study of existing art, institutions, and manners,—to the diffusion of European acquirements or to the improvement of an acquaintance with the resources of these distant countries of which it might be desirable to avail ourselves.

Upon this principle, it has been resolved that a Society be instituted, for the encouragement of literature, science, and arts, in connection with India, and other countries eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, to be denominated the "Asiatic Society of London," that the gentlemen whose names have been subscribed shall be considered original Members; and a general Meeting of the Society shall be held on Saturday, the 15th March, for the election of Officers, and the nomination of a Committee to frame regulations; that the Members be classed Resident, Non Resident, and Honorary: that, previous to the general Meeting gentlemen proposed by three original Members be admitted without ballot; and that all candidates, subsequently proposed, must be ballotted for on the recommendation of no less than three Members, of whom one, at least, can certify from personal knowledge; that each Resident Member shall contribute the sum of two guineas a year, or pay a composition of twenty four guineas in lieu of annual payments; that each Non-Resident Member be admitted, on paying a composition of ten guineas; that foreigners, European or Asiatic, may be elected by ballot Honorary Members, admitted to the meetings of the Society when in England, and invited to correspond with it when abroad. That the countries to which the researches of this Society will extend, are generally those which are situated eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, and especially such as are comprehended under British dominion.

That honorary medals be proffered by the Society for communications of useful information, or important discoveries, connected with the objects which it is within the province of the Society to promote. Voluntary donations towards defraying the expense of rewards to be offered for useful inventions, and discoveries applicable to Indian objects will constitute a separate fund.

It is proposed to publish the transactions of the Society from time to time; and it is hoped that the volumes of the Society may become the means of preserving much valuable information, which, from the want of a suitable channel of publication, is now exposed to neglect and loss.

SHREWSBURY CRIMINAL COURT.

MARCH 22.

John Newton was indicted for the wilful murder of his wife, Sarah Newton, on the 22d of January last. The indictment charged him with effecting her death by violently beating and striking her, by throwing her down on a sledge, and by kicking her, in consequence of which she languished for three hours, and then died.

Mr. Pearson opened the case for the prosecution. He stated that the prisoner was a farmer, residing at Severn-hall, near Bridgenorth, in this county, who had been married to the deceased several years. He then give an outline of the leading circumstances of the case.

George Edwards was first examined.—He said I am a tinner and brazier at Bridgenorth, and have occasionally supplied the prisoner with articles. On the 12th of January, I called at his house at Severn-hall, in this county, for my bill. He observed, on one item, that he had given his wife money to pay for it, and said she had run him in debt at different times; he seemed to be in a passion about it, and said he would give her a good thrashing. He called her; she came in, and he asked her if he had not given her money to pay for the lantern, which she seemed to allow. He asked me to stay and take beer; he seemed much hurt about the article charged, and said he would beat his wife, but I advised him not to do so, and offered to erase the item rather than there should be any word about so simple a thing. I came away about eight o'clock in the evening. Before I went away, I passed through the kitchen, and saw her sitting by the fire, shook hands with her, and told her to keep up her spirits. She was low, but did not appear in ill health. When I left, he came out with me, and I called out, "Good night, Mrs. Newton," supposing her to be in the kitchen, but she was not there. On this, the prisoner said, "She's gone to hide herself; she knows what she has to expect." I talked to him again about beating her, and told him I would never speak to him again if he did. I went home to Bridgenorth. Sometime between 1 and 2 o'clock I heard a knocking, and went down. At the door I met the prisoner, who told me a bad job had happened, for Mrs. Newton was very ill. I said—"Good God, Mr. Newton, I hope you have done nothing wrong." He replied, it was not from his striking her, but from her situation; and alluded to something which might cause it. He said his reason for calling on me was to ask me to show him Dr. Hall's door. I did so, and went in to bed.

On cross-examination, the witness said Dr. Hall was a surgeon at Bridgenorth; he believed that the prisoner knocked at his door.

Mary Jones.—I lived nearly 3 years a servant in Mr. Newton's family. On the evening my mistress died, she sent me on some errand across the Severn. About four I started; my mistress was then very low, but was not particularly unwell. About 8 o'clock I recrossed the river by the ferry. The Severn is about six fields from Mr. Newton's house. When I was four fields from Severn-hall, I heard a noise coming from that direction. It was an exclamation—"O dear, dad, do not," from Mr. Newton's child, or children. I went into the house, and found Mrs. Newton lying by the house door with no one but little John, a child of 3 years old. There was much blood on the lower part of her clothes. I went to her and raised her up. She continued bleeding. While she was lying on the floor, Julia Oliver, the apprentice girl, came in, having been called by my master. Before we took her to the bed room, W. Batch came in; she called to him and shook hands with him, and said "God bless you!" My master then came and asked my mistress which was the rogue, she or he? My master fetched Sally Lloyd, a charwoman from Bridgenorth, & we got her to bed. After this I was backwards & forwards in my mistress's room. Before my master went to bed, he went into her room and abused her while I was warming his bed. He then went to bed. Mr. Hall's assistant came before my mistress's death. Sally Lloyd went to my master, and told him that his wife was dead. I do not recollect his answer. He rose and dressed himself, and said he would go for the doctor. He brought no one back with him. Two or three days' after, a coroner's jury came to our house. Before this my master told me not to say that I was four fields off the house when I heard the children cry, and not to say that the mistress had said any thing to me. I had told other servants before this what my mistress had said to me. I was examined before the jury. After this my master sent for me up stairs, and asked what I had told them? I informed him that I had said I was four fields off the house when I heard the children cry. He asked me what I told that for, and said "Did I desire you not to tell?" I went out of the room.

On cross-examination, the witness said my mistress was four or five months gone with child; she had been hard at work brewing and baking that day.

Julia Oliver said, I was an apprentice of the prisoner. On the night when my mistress died I put the young children to bed, and went to bed

…ell, between seven and eight. I then left my mistress in the kitchen with William Batch and George Littleford, and her little son. I went to bed, and was awakened by my master, who told me to get up and take care of my mistress, while he went to fetch Sarah Lloyd. I rose and found my mistress lying on her back on the hearth before the fire. Mary Jones was with her. There was much boold on the lower part of her clothes. She corroborated the preceding witness's testimony as to other circumstances.

William Batch said, I was waggoner to the prisoner in January last. I remember Edwards coming to his house on the 22d of that month. About six o'clock I saw my mistress; she was then well. A little before eight I went to bed. I afterwards heard one of the children cry as if beaten. I went to sleep again, and was awoke by my master, who called to me, "Will: you must come down directly to your mistress." I went down and found her on the house floor. Newton was not then in the room. She said to me "God bless you, Will; I take my leave of you." There was a sight of blood on the floor. Her lip was cut, and she had a black eye. I then went into the brewhouse, but afterwards returned to the kitchen. My master once said after her death "he would give all the world for her again," that was all he ever said to me.

Sarah Lloyd deposed—I am a widow, residing at Bridgenorth, and am in the habit of attending the sick. I have often worked at Newton's. About nine on the night of his wife's death he came to my house, and called to me to come to his, as his mistress was very ill. I came down and asked him to walk in; he said he could not, as his wife was so ill in the way she had been before. I went with him; he said if he had such bills as those brought in he could not pay his rent, and said something about a bill of 50s. or 51s but which I do not remember. When I reached the house, I found Mrs. Newton lying on her side on the hearth, with her knee bent forward. There was a quantity of blood. She had a black eye, and a cut upon her lip I asked her who did it? She did not appear to me to be then in danger. I continued with her till he died.

Mr. Pearson then applied to the learned Judge for his opinion, whether he could properly give evidence, of the declarations of the deceased, as her expression, "God bless you," to Batch, indicating a sense of her danger, had then been spoken.

Mr. Justice Best thought it would not be evidence as the continuing apprehension could not be shown.

The witness proceeded.—I afterwards assisted my mistress up stairs, and saw her undressed. After she was in bed, I saw my master as he was going to bed, he came up and asked me how she was I told him she was very ill. He replied, "She may thank herself for that, for having bills brought in. I told him to say what he had to say in the morning and go to bed. To the best of my knowledge, nothing was said about the doctor. Before he went, he had come down, and I had told him there must be a doctor. He said he could not go; I told him then I would go myself. I sent Batch for a doctor, and Mr. Barber (Hall's assistant) came. He told me to apply vinegar, and left a draught for her to take. The prisoner was then in bed. In consequence of something which Barber said, I went to Mr. Newton, and asked him what he did those wounds with? He said "with his hand." I did not tell him what Barber had said to me I had explained to Barber the situation in which I found her. At twelve or one o'clock Mrs. Newton died. When she was dead, I went and informed the prisoner. He jumped out of bed in a great fright from his two little boys, and seemed extremely alarmed. He exclaimed, "Lord have mercy on me!" and said "She was not dead; she was either fainted or in a fit," I told him, "She was dead too true to make a lie of." He went down stairs, and said he would fetch the doctor. I assisted in laying out the body the same night. There was a black mark on her breast and hand: another on her leg, where the skin was off in a place about as big as a sixpence, and another mark (which the witness described.) I washed the clothes, and the prisoner told me to stop. The gown was ripped across the arm. There was no mark of soil upon it. Mrs. Newton was generally a mild good-natured woman, and obedient to her husband.

On cross-examination, the witness said she would at times be violent, while her passion lasted. It was the face which the prisoner said he had struck with the hand. The witness had attended the deceased in her lying in; she had once before a violent discharge of blood.

Ann Jones, the mother of the witness Mary Jones, said, I recollect my daughter attending before the coroner. After that, I went with her to a room where the prisoner was. He asked her what she had told the gentleman. She said she had told them that she was four fields off the house when she heard the children cry, "O dear! do not, dad." He said, "What did you tell them that for? Did I not tell you not to say so?" I asked what he would have her say? He said "She might have choosed not to have said it, if she had a mind." On another occasion, after the inquest, a child of the prisoner, named James, said to me, in the prisoners presence, "Nancy, my mam lay down here (pointing to the hearth) after my dad beat her." He said, "Hush! hush! don't talk about your mam."

Mr. Pearson appealed to his Lordship for his judgement as to the course which he should pursue with respect to the children. They were very young; the eldest only eight years of age; and he should feel extremely reluctant to call them, unless the interests of public justice absolutely required it.

Mr. Justice Best said, that he did not think, from what he understood respecting the eldest of the children, that he would be brought to say any thing; and, in a case so extremely distressing, he should not compel him to speak. He thought, therefore, it would be better the learned counsel should not call him.

Mr. James Barber was then called, and examined by Mr. PEARSON.—He said I am the assistant of Mr. Hall, surgeon, at Bridgenorth. On the night of Mrs. Newton's death I was called in. I found her in bed bleeding. At that moment I could form no accurate judgement of its cause. I made no particular examination till after the death, when Mr. Coley was present. I saw her face when I was called in; a cut was on her lip, and her eye blackened; and there was the mark of a blow on the forehead. She then appeared to be very weak. I ordered her laudanum and brandy, and directed an application of vinegar and water, I asked to see her clothes, but only saw the external dress. After her death I examined all her clothes; but they were washed. When I saw Mrs. Newton I considered her in great danger. I left her before she expired. In the course of that night Mr. Newton came to Mr. Hall's, between one & two. He said he wished Mr. Hall to go and see his wife, as she was very dangerous, and he thought she was dying. I said I thought all that could be done was done, and gave him a bottle of medicine. After her death I examined the body. I found a mark on the breast, and a discolouration on the left leg, which might have been done by a fall or kick. I saw a small scratch on the belly. (He also saw other marks, which he described.) One blow or one fall could not have caused these marks. The other injuries might have been occasioned by a kick, or a fall over a stile, but a fall not so probably. I was present at the opening of the body. Some vessels were ruptured. The witness was then examined as to physical circumstances bearing on the question, whether the bleeding proceeded from natural causes or from violence. The result was, that he was of opinion the bleeding had been produced by external violence.

On cross-examination the witness said, I have been nine years in the profession. On cooler judgement, I think laudanum was a good thing to administer. He was then questioned whether great exertion, anger, or passion might not have produced the effect; and he gave his opinion that it might even have produced rupture of the vessels. He was then interrogated by the learned Judge, whether he had not sworn before the Coroner that Mrs. Newton's death was caused by "hæmorrhage, and not by any blow," as appeared from his written deposition; but he asserted that he had simply said her death proceeded from hæmorrhage.

The learned Judge expressed his great regret that the witness should have left the deceased in her condition, and should not have returned when called for.

Mr. James Milman Coley, who opened the body on Tuesday 28th of January, the day when the inquest was held, described the appearances which presented themselves, and gave a decided opinion that Mrs. Newton's death was caused by hæmorrhage occasioned by external violence. He also stated the smaller injuries, which he thought must have arisen from many blows.

Mr. Edward Humphreys, a surgeon, in extensive practice at Shrewsbury, who had not seen the body, was called to give his medical judgement on the circumstances stated by Mr. Coley. He agreed with him in his conclusions.

The prisoner said, in his defence, that he was in liquor at the time, and his wife began with him first. She set upon him and struck him first; but he did not mean to do her any harm.

The counsel for the prisoner then proposed to call evidence as to the state of his mind.

Mr. John Hewit, apothecary to the goal, said I recollect the prisoner being brought to the goal on the 10th of February last. I then examined him once. On the 12th I examined him twice. On the first day I observed him to labour under great dejection of spirits. On the next day I found him in the same condition. On the third day he seemed in an incoherent state; he seemed violent in his manner; and more like an insane person than a sane one. In the evening he was in a state of violent derangement, quite unmanageable, and required three men to hold him. I conceived him to be then insane. I administered medicines to allay the irritation; he continued in the same state till the next day, when he was much more tranquil in consequence of some medicine which I gave him. I had previously manacled his hands. He continued in an incoherent state of mind for some days longer. He did appear to me to be in a state of insanity. I have thought, from the wildness of his countenance, that it arose from hereditary predisposition. The diet and discipline of a prison would restrain such predisposition if it existed.

On cross-examination, the witness said he had read Cullen's First Lines of Physic on diseases in general. He had never read any one book exclusively on diseases of the mind. He had never had a patient afflicted with insanity under his care out of goal, if he were afflicted with an hereditary predisposition to madness, it must have shown itself before his age. The witness inferred the disposition to insanity from wildness, and weakness of countenance. There was nothing in his manner different from that of many other persons charged with great offences. He was not incoherent on the first day of his arrival at the prison.

Mr. William Proud said I am a surgeon. A relation of my father's kept an asylum for lunatics at Bilston, and my father at Bridgenorth. I was bred up under my father. I have seen many insane patients; the taint is often hereditary. I had James Newton a brother of the prisoner, under my care in December, 1820, and the January following. He was insane. I did not succeed in curing him, and he was placed in the Asylum at Stafford.

In answer to a question by the Judge, the witness said he could not discriminate hereditary madness from other madness by the countenance of the patient.

John Newton, of Sedgley, said, I am uncle to the prisoner. I have known two of his relatives confined in the asylum One was Joseph Turton, of Willenhall, the prisoner's mother's uncle & who died insane. The other was John Turton Shawe, a surgeon, whose mother was cousin to the prisoner's mother, and who was attended at his house for some time, and then removed to Bliston, and died insane at the age of 25. I know Mrs. Smith, the prisoner's aunt who was insane, and for whom I fetched medicines. All these were on the mother's side.

In answer to a question from the Judge, the witness said he never knew the prisoner himself to be insane.

John Taylor said; I lived as waggoner with the prisoner's father from 1800 to 1802. He was then living with his father. He and I slept in the same bed. He has got up several times in the night. There was a gun in the room, which he once let off. I spoke to him about this, and he said he knew nothing about it. I have fetched him in from the fold-yard naked in the early part of the night. When I have asked him what he did there, he has laughed and said he did not know. I really thought at times he was affected in his head, and told his mother so.

Eight other witnesses who had known the prisoner during many years, deposed to his extraordinary conduct on a variety of occasions. They had always considered him to be insane.

Mr. Ebenezer Vanghan, a surgeon of Shrewsbury, who was accidentally present in Court, said that, having heard the evidence, he thought that no organ of the deceased, essential to life, was so injured as to occasion death. Had proper remedies been applied, the chances would have been in favour of her living. If the arteries had been taken up, the hemorrhage might have been stopped, and the constitution might have rallied. A local examination ought to have been taken directly, and then proper means would have been suggested. He thought laudanum could do no injury.

(The witness was then examined respecting the possibility of the principal injury arising from violent passion after hard labour, and expressed his opinion that it might have been so caused. He had never known it, however, in the course of his own practice. On being questioned by the Judge, he said the injury might have been caused by a kick, and such a kick might probably produce death.)

The counsel for the prosecution, in reply, called Mr. Coley, who said I have attended the prisoner's family from 1813 to 1821, when I was succeeded by Mr. Hall. I attended frequently, and saw the prisoner. I never saw the slightest symptom which led me to suppose he was insane. I know that his brother was insane. There is a family likeness in the faces. I never saw any symptom of insanity when I have conversed with him on the birth of his children.

Mr. Hall, who succeeded Mr. Coley, said he had seen the prisoner but seldom. He never saw any symptom of insanity in his conduct.

George Edwards, the first witness, was recalled by the learned Judge, and said that he and two others, on the afternoon in question, drank five or six jugs of beer; but it was weak, and he thought himself and the prisoner sober. He did not then think him otherwise than in his senses.

Mr. Justice Best proceeded to charge the Jury. In this case they would have some questions, to decide most important to the public and to the prisoner. The first of these was, whether the deceased came to her death by the act of the prisoner; the second, whether, if she died by the prisoner's violence, the injury was inflicted under circumstances which would mitigate the offence to manslaughter, or give it the complexion of murder; and lastly, whether the prisoner, if he did the act charged, was at the time in a state to know what he did, and to understand the difference between good and evil. On the first of those points, though there had been some difference of opinion in matters of science betwen medical witnesses, yet they agreed in this essential point—that a kick given to a woman in the situation of the deceased, would probably occasion death. On the second point, it was true that no deadly weapon had been employed; but if a person beat another immoderatly so as to cause death, when he was not under the influence of rage, from some provocation very recently given, (for the law allowed him but a short time to cool), he would be guilty of murder. As to the last question, it was not enough to excuse the prisoner that he was a wayward or a passionate man, nor even would it be a defence to show that he had been subject to madness. Such a fact, if proved, would lead the jury to watch with more anxious care the evidence which applied to the state of mind in which he was at the time of the act; but this must be the whole of its influence; for if even a lunatic had lucid intervals, and in one of these he committed a crime, he would be liable to suffer the penalties of the law. The learned Judge
